Intel is the world's largest semiconductor manufacturer and supplies microprocessors and chipsets to PC and server markets. It also supplies NAND and NOR flash memories through joint-ventures, and is expanding into netbook, handheld and embedded markets.

Summary: Intel preannounced expected upside for 3Q09 before the market opened last Friday due to microprocessor and chipset strength. PC companies have reported strength from consumer notebooks and netbooks, although Intel did not provide any granularity beyond 'microprocessor and chipsets.' I am slightly raising my estimates and target price, but continue to recommend the shares as a Hold with a trading range between $15 and my new 12-month target price of $22 based on revised 2010 estimates.

3Q09 Upside: Management specifically raised revenue guidance to $9 billion, plus or minus $200M (up from $8.5 billion, plus or minus $400 million), and gross margin to the upper half of the previous range of 53% plus or minus a couple of points. All other guidance remains unchanged. Microprocessors and chipset were cited as the source of strength, but no other information was provided. This preannouncement was not previously scheduled, nor was it accompanied by a conference call. The 3Q earnings announcement is scheduled for October 13.

Revised Estimates: My revised estimates are consistent with guidance, although I have chosen to reflect revenue on the rich side. My revised estimates pretty much assume a return to normal seasonal quarterly revenue patterns over the next six quarters despite my severe discomfort associated with the current macroeconomic climate. Because of that, I consider my revised estimates to be toward the higher-end of possible outcomes.

Valuation Still Not Attractive: Valuation tables are provided on page 6 of this report. INTC continues to trade at or above the highest levels of two separate peer groups in terms of current and expected price-earnings and price-sales ratios. The first peer group I use are large-cap, blue-chip technology firms that includes CSCO, DELL, GE, HPQ, IBM, MSFT; and the second set consists of large, vertically-integrated chip companies that includes AMD, MU, NSM, TXN and STM.

INTC appears somewhat attractive on a historical average price-sales ratio basis where it is currently trading at 3.4-times trailing sales and 2.9-times next year's expected sales against an average of 4.8-times since 1990. However, this would be predicated on overall equity market valuations reverting to the mean, and I would not expect INTC to outperform relative to its peers under such a scenario. Share price action could track a favorable view of overall equity markets.

On a strictly fundamental basis, I would be interested in the shares under the $15 level at the current time, and a technical support level just over $12 has been established in recent months. My revised 12-month target price of $22 from $21 is based on 20-times next years earnings and 3-times next years sales, but does not render enough upside to justify a recommendation upgrade from my current Hold for two reasons: first is the limited potential upside; and second is the optimistic nature of my current earnings model. I continue to recommend INTC as Hold with a trading range between $15 and $22.

My Background

I have an electrical engineering background, nearly 12 years of semiconductor industry experience, and was on Wall Street for nearly eight years where I was selected as the Best On The Street semiconductor analyst for 2002 by The Wall Street Journal, and third-rated Best of the Best across all sectors.

I obtained my undergraduate BS degree in electrical engineering from the University of Washington, and my MBA from Santa Clara University. My industry experience consists of nearly 12 years in various technical sales and marketing roles at four different semiconductor firms located in Silicon Valley beginning with Advanced Micro Devices in 1984, followed by two small start-up companies, and ending at Cirrus Logic where I supported the firm's Japanese market development. I joined Fahnstock & Co. as a senior semiconductor analyst in 1996 and was recruited by Needham & Co. in April 2000.

My formal coverage list as a sell-side analyst included the following equities: AMD, ALSC, ALTR, ARTI, ATML, CUBE, CY, ESST, GNSS, INTC, ISSI, LSI, MOSY, MU, OIIM, OVTI, RMTR, SIII, SMSC, STEC, SVTG, TDFX, TSRA, TXN, and ZRAN.
